Teaching and Research Supervision

Currently principal supervisor for five PhD students, with a further six completed.

I have taught at St Andrews and Cambridge, and at the College of Wooster (Ohio), in a wide range of areas, from first-year undergraduate to M.Litt. level, including large lecture groups (150 students), small discussion seminars or individual dissertation supervision, and a range of class sizes in between. Teaching areas include epistemology, political philosophy, metaphysics, philosophy of science, and critical thinking.
